
Contents

Foreword	vii
Executive Summary Simon J. Evenett	1
 SECTION 1: What's at stake? The clash that could have been...and could still be
1. Correcting the Chinese exchange rate: an action plan C. Fred Bergsten	9
2. A trade war is entirely unnecessary Yu Yongding	15
 SECTION 2: Recent developments concerning the renminbi-dollar exchange rate
3. What caused China's current-account surplus? Yiping Huang	23
4. Congress and Chinese currency legislation Claude Barfield	29
 SECTION 3: The renminbi and global imbalances
5. Is an undervalued renminbi the source of global imbalances? Charles Wyplosz	37
6. A trade theorist's take on global imbalance Alan V. Deardorff	43
 SECTION 4: How much does the renminbi need to appreciate? To what effect?
7. The renminbi since 2005 Jeffrey Frankel	51
8. Is China's currency overvalued? Helmut Reisen	61
9. New PPP-based estimates of renminbi undervaluation and policy implications Arvind Subramanian	69
10. Measuring misalignment: Latest estimates for the Chinese renminbi Yin-Wong Cheung, Menzie D Chinn and Eiji Fuji	79
11. The 2005 to 2008 appreciation of the yuan and US trade Peter K. Schott	91
12. Impact of China's exchange-rate policy on trade in Asia Alicia García-Herrero and Tuuli Koivu	101

SECTION 5: Does the crisis-era renminbi regime violate WTO rules? Is the threat of WTO litigation credible?

13. Currency ‘manipulation’ and world trade: a caution	109
Robert W. Staiger and Alan O. Sykes
14. Currency undervaluation as a violation of GATT Article XV:4	115
Jorge Miranda
15. Yuan to fight about it? The WTO legality of China’s exchange regime	127
Joel P. Trachtman
16. Retaliating against exchange rate manipulation under WTO rules	133
Michael Waibel
17. Is the Chinese exchange-rate regime ‘WTO-legal’?	139
Dukgeun Ahn
18. China's currency regime is legitimately challengeable as a subsidy under ASCM rules	147
John Magnus and Timothy C Brightbill

SECTION 6: Potential responses by industrialised countries

19. Deconstructing Sino-US codependence: revaluation, tariffs, exports and jobs	155
Joseph Francois
20. US policy approaches to Chinese currency	165
Philip I. Levy
21. Is the 1971 "import surcharge" a useful precedent?	171
Simon J. Evenett
22. What should the US and China learn from the past US-Japan conflict?	177
Jenny Corbett and Takatoshi Ito
23. Should Europe join the US in condemning Chinese currency manipulation?	183
Patrick A. Messerlin
24. China: revisiting the issue of mercantilism	187
François Godement

SECTION 7: Potential responses by China

25. Beijing blinks first – the currency debate in diplomatic context	195
Andrew Small
26. Great expectations: (Competing) domestic drivers of Chinese policy deliberations	201
Shaun Breslin
27. Absent revaluation, retaliation? Reactions to US restrictions on Chinese exports	209
Kati Suominen
28. China's holdings of US government debt: A dagger pointed at the heart of the US economy?	217
Eswar Prasad	