

Contents

1 The Artistic and the Aesthetic: A Distinction Considered . . . . .	1
1.1 A Crucial Distinction . . . . .	2
1.2 Transfiguration and Artistic Properties . . . . .	5
1.3 Some Corollaries of the Distinction . . . . .	8
1.4 Contrasting Views of the Aesthetic . . . . .	10
1.5 The Artistic as Sensuous? . . . . .	12
1.6 The Ambiguity of Artistic Properties . . . . .	15
1.7 An Example: The Case of Marla . . . . .	17
1.8 Exploring the Contrast: Methodology . . . . .	20
1.9 Outline of This Work . . . . .	22
1.10 On Not Defining Art . . . . .	23
2 Art, Meaning and Occasion-Sensitivity . . . . .	29
2.1 Meaning Meaning . . . . .	30
2.2 Exceptions (a): Dealing with Defeasibility . . . . .	33
2.3 Exceptions (b): Disambiguation? . . . . .	34
2.4 An Occasion-Sensitive View of Meaning and Understanding . . . . .	36
2.5 Contextualism in Philosophical Aesthetics . . . . .	41
2.6 Competent Judges . . . . .	45
2.7 Meaning, Explaining, and Artistic Properties . . . . .	47
2.8 Meaning, Explanation and Content . . . . .	51
2.9 The Context of Philosophical Aesthetics . . . . .	54
3 Art and Life-Issues: Meeting Counter-Cases . . . . .	57
3.1 Artistic Value and Life-Issues . . . . .	57
3.2 Life-Issues Connection to Artworks? . . . . .	58
3.3 The Importance of Life-Issues . . . . .	62
3.4 Learning from Art? . . . . .	63
3.5 Art and Moral Value: Moderate Moralism, Ethicism . . . . .	67
3.6 A Seven-Part Strategy . . . . .	72
3.7 Literary Value and Moral Understanding: Nussbaum . . . . .	75
3.8 A Conflict Between Morality and Art? . . . . .	78
3.9 Conclusion . . . . .	81

4 Intention, Authorship and Artistic Realism . . . . .	85
4.1 The Intention of the Artist . . . . .	85
4.2 Excursus: Hypothetical Intentionalism and Its Discontents . . . . .	92
4.3 The Embodiment of Artistic Meaning . . . . .	96
4.4 Making Meaning: The Concept “Art” . . . . .	97
4.5 Making Sense: ‘History of Production’ . . . . .	101
4.6 Response-Reliance and Artistic Properties . . . . .	103
4.7 Understanding and Criticism . . . . .	106
4.8 Criticism and Inference . . . . .	109
4.9 The ‘Reality’ of Artistic Properties . . . . .	112
5 The Historical Character of Art . . . . .	119
5.1 Precursors and the Past . . . . .	119
5.2 Art, Change of Meaning and Standard Historicism . . . . .	120
5.3 Forward Retroactivism, and the Threat of Misperception . . . . .	124
5.4 Are These Genuine Properties? . . . . .	127
5.5 Reasons and ‘New Evidence’ . . . . .	129
5.6 Are These New Properties? . . . . .	131
5.7 Making Sense of the Past . . . . .	134
5.8 Oeuvre , Action and Understanding . . . . .	135
5.9 Genre and Artistic Intention . . . . .	137
5.10 An Argument Against Any Historicism . . . . .	141
5.11 Historical Character and Understanding—Some Realism . . . . .	143
6 The Republic of Art: A Plausible Institutional Account of Art? . . . . .	147
6.1 The Idea of an Institutional Concept . . . . .	147
6.2 Sketch of an Institutional Account of Art . . . . .	148
6.3 A More Plausible (than Dickie’s) Account of Art . . . . .	150
6.4 Topics for Criticism . . . . .	152
6.5 Does Dickie’s Later Theory Fare Better? . . . . .	156
6.6 Wollheim’s Criticism . . . . .	157
6.7 Critical Reflections . . . . .	160
6.8 Can the Institution Be Wrong? . . . . .	164
6.9 The Friends of Jones . . . . .	166
6.10 What the Account Offers . . . . .	170
7 Conclusion . . . . .	175
7.1 The Framework: A Summary . . . . .	175
7.2 The Aesthetic Reconsidered . . . . .	178
7.3 Envoi: The Muscular Aesthetic . . . . .	179
References . . . . .	181
Index . . . . .	189