

---

Contents

---

Notes on contributors	vii
1 Introduction: lawyers, law, and society YVES DEZALAY AND BRYANT G. GARTH	1
PART I
Law embedded in social capital and converted into legal and political capital	17
2 Greasing the squeaky wheel of justice: networks of Venezuelan lawyers from the pacted democracy to the Bolivarian Revolution MANUEL A. GÓMEZ	19
3 Lawyers, political embeddedness, and institutional continuity in China's transition from socialism ETHAN MICHELSON	39
4 Italian legal elites: the classical model and its transformation MARIA MALATESTA	67
PART II
Imported know-how and local know-who	91
5 Human rights and the rule of law in Argentina: transnational advocacy networks and the transformation of the national legal field VIRGINIA VECCHIOLI	93
6 Criminal procedure reform in Chile: new agents and the restructuring of a field DANIEL PALACIOS MUÑOZ	112

vi Contents

---

7	The European Union and the United States in Eastern Europe: two ways of exporting law, expertise and state power OLE HAMMERSLEV	134
8	Toward a sociology of the global rule of law field: neoliberalism, neoconstitutionalism, and the contest over judicial reform in Latin America CÉSAR RODRÍGUEZ-GARAVITO	156
	PART III
	Testing rule-of-law hypotheses in the context of the largest Asian economies	183
9	The reform of the profession of lawyers in Japan and its impact on the role of law KAY-WAH CHAN	185
10	The democratization and internationalization of the Korean legal field KIM SEONG-HYUN	217
11	Searching for political liberalism in all the wrong places: the legal profession in China as the leading edge of political reform? RANDALL PEERENBOOM	239
12	Conclusion: how to convert social capital into legal capital and transfer legitimacy across the major practice divide YVES DEZALAY AND BRYANT G. GARTH	260
	Index	267